leaves in autumn and bear flowers in spring season. These are the plants' response to the changing seasons. Similarly, animals and human beings also respond to changes in the environment. For example, you switch on the fan in summer because you feel hot and wear woollen clothes in winter as you feel cold. Similarly, a dog hangs out its tongue when it feels hot and an elephant fans its ears to keep itself cool in summer. Some birds migrate from one place to another as a response to change in weather conditions. Animals and human beings have sense organs to help them feel these changes.

Migrate
To move from one place to another for a particular time period.

On the other hand, non-living things do not respond to changes in the surroundings. This is because they cannot sense or feel any changes.

Living things reproduce

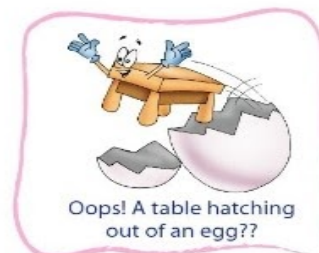

All living things reproduce. Human beings and animals like cats, dogs, cows, buffaloes, etc. give birth to their young ones. Birds, fishes, snakes and frogs lay eggs and the young ones hatch out of the eggs. Plants produce seeds from which new plants arise. Have you ever seen a table giving rise to a new baby table? No, because non-living things cannot reproduce.
